SELL MORE MILK

A news item pertaining to the development of the dairy industry ought to be an inspiration to our farmer friends. We invite their consideration of the facts set forth as coming from other counties of Georgia.

Northeast Georgia, less favorably situated for general farming than have been in the past few years by seasonal conditions. Where the growing of cotton and corn had been the dependence for profit, attention has been forced in other directions. The dairy industry has gradually evolved into one of importance. It would not point to that industry as the ideal one for sole dependence for income for the farmer, but the fact that it has been found profitable where other lines have failed makes an appeal to us. There is this fact that stands out: Bulloch county farmers may find profit in more dairy products if other Georgians are doing so. There is no call to abandon present lines of farming, but it is recognized that as a side line dairying can be made profitable.

There are already some Bulloch county farmers who are finding the sale of sweet milk profitable. In the past there have been two milk routes in Statesboro operated at some profit by enterprising farmers. Later still others are selling locally at retail. To be sure there is a limited market for milk in Statesboro, but there is an unlimited field for shipment. The local dairyman tells us today that he can handle almost any quantity of sweet milk produced under suitable conditions. Within the past week he has made contracts with two or three other farmers to take their sweet milk at remunerative prices for shipment to other markets. Bulloch county farmers ought to be able to profit by the experience of the farmers of other sections of Georgia. A few cows as a side line would be profitable on every farm.

So few people stay at home any more that it's a wonder the surgeons don't all get rich and retire.

GROWING ORANGES

The demonstration conducted at the plantation of Hon. Mills B. Lane Tuesday, wherein the public was invited to witness the harvesting of his crop of oranges for commercial purposes, was perhaps interesting to those who had never seen oranges growing to any considerable extent. It was also interesting, perhaps, as illustrating the possibilities of the orange industry in Georgia.

It is easy to be a doubter, however, and personally we would not advise our friends to venture very heavily over the orange industry in this section. The Satsuma orange is said to be especially suited to the soil and climate of the coastal region. It is said to mature earlier here and better even than in Florida. As to that we do not know. There is, however, always remaining this one fact: There is no new industry that pans out in reality like the figures of a statistician can make it appear on paper. Florida is suited by nature for the growing of oranges. Only occasionally does the temperature drop so low as to materially damage the crop. Millions of boxes of fruit are shipped annually from Florida, but there are few if any wealthy orange growers in Florida. The big money in the orange industry is made by those who have produced groves and then sold the fruit to somebody else at fancy prices. Occasionally there is profit to the grower from his crop, but there are off periods for the orange grower as there are even for the cotton farmer. It is not a matter in which the producer can always win. If he makes a bumper crop, the prices are sure to be down; if the price is high, it is because the crop is short.

It might be a nice thing for every Georgian to have an orange tree in his yard—maybe two or three of them—but when Georgia farmers decide to compete with Florida in the production of oranges for market, they are starting out on a venture which will wind up disastrously for them. The nurseryman who sells them trees will be sure to profit, but Georgia can buy oranges to better advantage than they can produce them.

CONUNDRUM CONTEST FOR GEORGIA EDITORS

(Greensboro, Ga., Herald-Journal)
 One of the best ways we know to interest the editors of Georgia in one of its greatest problems would be to get up a sort of cross-word puzzle or conundrum reading something like this:

What is the relation between the fact that middle and north Georgia's wells are running low, the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti in Boston, Mass., and the federal government? No, we are talking sense. And if we were to write one of the competing papers in that contest, it would read like this:

"The wells of middle and north Georgia are running dry because, over a period of three years, we are 26 inches more behind in the last year. We haven't been talking 'drouth' this year because there has been just about enough rainfall during the crop season to get us through. But we haven't made up the lack of water inherited from previous years. So actually we have a drouth right now. It is apparent on the surface of the streams to some extent and would be very apparent if we had some way of looking underground."

"That's the first point. (And right here you can begin thinking of Muscle Shoals and electric power.)" "Sacco and Vanzetti, as we see it, were executed by the New England folks principally because they were Italian anarchists concerned with the labor troubles up there. They may have been murderers also, but there is no denying that the strong feeling against them arose from the fact that they were a part of the agitation which is menacing New England mills and industries—and causing those mills to move South."

"That is the second point. Mills are moving to the South, and the water here is low."

"You see the third point (Muscle Shoals power) already. The South needs the electric power from Muscle Shoals so that the South can come into its own—so that we can have steady and sufficient electric power to offer the mills. The federal machinery at Muscle Shoals is out of date. A newer and better and cheaper process has been invented (the Haber process) and there are plenty of commercial sources of fertilizer—something that was not true when Uncle Sam took one of the South's best water-power sites for this purpose in 1917."

"Take our own city of Greensboro. We get power about as Augusta does. We have it on the authority of Postmaster Pink Wood of Augusta, that everything in Augusta would be shut down right now if it were not for the power at Muscle Shoals. We are not linked up with the big five-states superpower system. And an important part of that system. And an important part of that system today is the power dam and machinery at Muscle Shoals. With little rain falling on the water sheds of the southeast that power at Muscle Shoals is mighty important to us. It insures our having electric current."

"We in Greensboro and Greene county and Georgia and the south—agricultural folks though we are—should be mightily exercised that Congress does not take Muscle Shoals power away from us to make fertilizer by an obsolete method to meet a war-time need that no longer exists."

"We agree with the proposal of Tip Coffee, of West Point, that if the politicians want to insist on Muscle Shoals' having a fertilizer identity, then let Congress lease Muscle Shoals for its power and use the money from the lease for modern fertilizer uses—developing new uses of the fertilizer and entering the market with the money, if need be, to preserve a proper selling price for the farmer."

That's our answer to the conundrum, brother editors. What is yours?

After all, the only difference between the east and west is that the west got over being wild.

GEORGIA CREAM STATIONS PAYING GOOD MONEY

Athens, Ga., Nov. 28.—Specialists of the Georgia State College of Agriculture have just compiled some interesting figures concerning the cream stations which have grown up in northeastern Georgia over the last two years. While there are some objections to cream stations these figures indicate that they may be of constructive service in developing the dairy industry.

These stations are all, directly or indirectly, the result of the work done by the extension forces of the Georgia State College of Agriculture. Thirty-two stations are in operation in the Athens territory while in 1926 there were only two. Growing from nothing in 1926 these stations now have a patronage of 2130. The growth has been remarkable as seen from the following: "76 farmers in five counties, that today ship sweet milk, began their operations with few cows, when they shipped to cream stations." Green county's five stations have marketed over $64,000 worth of cream since January first of the present year.

In several instances a creamery has been the outgrowth of the cream station. Hartwell and Elberton are both cases of this.

The following shows the growth of a few stations: Hancock county, 13 patrons Dec. 1926, 87 patrons Nov. 1927. Shipped $19,013.50 cream. Elbert county stations began with 6 customers and in eight months have grown to 170 customers, shipping $22,015.00 of cream.

The outgrowth of the cream station is seen in the sale of registered cows. Walton county purchased two and one-half cars, while five new bulls were purchased in Hart county, 6 in Green and 3 in Taliaferro.

The cream station in Georgia is a going proposition and each month sees new members and more cattle coming into the state.

The next step in the right direction is the grading of the cream shipped, for the creameries have found that they cannot make good butter from mixing all grades of cream.

State creameries have already started grading their cream with a premium for good quality and will be followed by others this week. This is following the creamery of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, which has been paying a premium for quality cream for three years.

For the month of October patrons in northeast Georgia derived an income of $45,474.00 from the sale of cream. This indicates an annual industry of more than $500,000 which has been built up in a little more than one year for this section. Georgia can use all and more dairy products than she can produce for some time so the future of the dairyman seems bright. In aiding this work, the Georgia State College of Agriculture has rendered a constructive service in building up this new industry for the state.

Pathos in Absurd Role

Played by Maximilian

Maximilian was a vague, kindly giant, devoted to Charlotte and to the personal care of the loveliest set of golden whisks then extant in envious Europe. All dressed up, he was, and no one to rule, writes Alexander Woodcock in Vanity Fair. There have been few more absurd ventures in recorded time than that pretentious but fundamentally halfhearted challenge in which this affable young man found himself sailing across the world to become emperor of remote and uncivilized Mexico. There is something more than half humor about even the most insistent and republican summons to rule. But surely there never was a fainter whisper in all history than that which called the mild Maximilian from the scholarly tranquility of Miramar to the uneasy throne of Mexico.

An old friend in Paris was involved in the terrible intrigue which sent a swarm of French Zouaves to die under a Mexican sun. The Comptons got him later. Then one of the bastards whom the first Napoleon left behind him was financially interested in any debt-collecting the French government could undertake. And Napoleon III was heavily responsible. Guadalupe, in his brilliant Mexican chapters of his incomparable "Second Empire," makes this crisp observation:

"The emperor had once stayed at the Washington hotel, Broadway, and he suffered for thirty years from the hallucination that he understood America."

Evaporated Milk in China

There is practically no use made of milk by the natives of China. The Chinese idea is that greater food values may be obtained from an acre of land by growing soy beans than by pasturing a cow. The thousands of foreigners in China, however, find no difficulty in obtaining milk, since foreign shops carry evaporated milk, which is merely sterilized cow's milk from which part of the water has been removed. The great bulk of the evaporated milk used is shipped from the United States. Sealed in hermetically sealed cans, and unopened, the evaporated milk will keep indefinitely in all sorts of weather and has the added advantage of being free from all disease-causing bacteria.

Snow No Terror

Snow has no terrors for the Salt Lake City street department. Water taken from municipally owned boiling springs is used to make it disappear as if by magic. The springs, located within the corporate limits, produce vast quantities of water which nature has heated to approximately 160 degrees Fahrenheit. This is carried in tanks to the business district, and the high-pressure pumps flush out the snow, clearing it within a few hours, regardless of the depth. The water contains 1,280 parts of sulphates to the 1,000,000. Thrown on the snow under high pressure, a cloud of steam arises and quickly the street is cleared.

Cured Him

My father used to enjoy making me feel embarrassed by saying, every time that we sat down to the table, when we had company: "Well, folks, help yourselves. I'm mighty glad you're here today, because the only time we have anything to eat is when we have company." Mother finally became tired of this oft-repeated little slam and retorted one day, in the presence of some of his best friends: "Yes, he's right. It is the only time we have anything to eat, because it's the only time he will provide anything."

It cured my father of his "clever company saying."—P. S., in Chicago Tribune.

Intricacies of Etiquette

Freddie, age five, was being trained to tip his cap to the women. Soon after his mother's explicit explanations regarding that particular etiquette, he went into the yard to play. His mother looked after him. Soon, Mrs. Smith, next door, came out. She and Freddie engaged in conversation but, much to the mother's chagrin, no cap was tipped.

Many years before his death, which occurred in 1886, James Henry Paine, the notorious miser, handed to Mr. Chickering, the Boston piano maker, a package for safe keeping, and asked no receipt or other acknowledgment. Many years later, during the celebrated legal contest over Paine's estate, Mr. Chickering happened to recall the incident, took the dust-covered package from his safe, and, tightly rolled in an old bandana handkerchief, found $400,000 of the miser's accumulations, which he at once turned in to the estate.

This Leadership exclusive in High-Compression Performance

The almost universal trend to the high-compression motor only serves to emphasize the exclusive method, advantages and results achieved by the Hudson Super-Six in this development. While conventional types depend upon special, costlier fuels to minimize roughness, the Hudson design uses any gasoline, delivering the extra power with the elastic smoothness of a steam engine.

Combined with the Super-Six principle this new invention makes Hudson the most powerful and economical car per pound weight in the world.

The extraordinary speed of Hudson getaway is but a single expression of the brilliant activity of the New Hudson Super-Six, which is carried on to every phase of performance.

A single ride will explain why this has been the most enthusiastically accepted Hudson ever built.

Stags Fight to Death for Herd Leadership

A duel between stags, though not so rare as a duel between elephants, says an Indian writer, is just as thrilling and many a king of these herds has won his position by challenging previous monarchs to a horn-to-horn fight.

The challenger stands four square and lowers his head to the monarch of the herd. This is the signal for a challenge to fight and the other bucks retire to a safe distance. The ladies tremble with fear and look on the death struggle with their big soft eyes. Fired with rage, the monarch charges into his insolent rival and stabs him with a sharp blow. The latter staggers back with the shock of the attack, but, nothing daunted, disengages his horns, springs aside, and cordially returns the compliment. Their horns are locked, and with lowered heads they push hard, slowly making an average of 50 per cent and above in all subjects and perfect attendance.

"How far wrong is it?" said Edward.

"Well, it's two dollars wrong, as a matter of fact. Why do you ask?" "Little Edward," a prettier's son, took a roll of banknotes from his pocket and peeled off a two-dollar bill.

Horse Meat in Prussia

More horse meat is being eaten in Prussia today than at any other time in history, not including the war period, when horses were slaughtered because there was little other meat available. The ministry of agriculture reports that the increased consumption is not due to a great rush for horse steaks, but to economic conditions. The consumption of horse meat increased 20 per cent this year over the corresponding period of 1925.

RED CROSS ADVANCES IN HEALTH PROTECTION

Record for Progress is Made in Protecting People of Vast Flooded Section.

Record health protective activities marked the year's climax of the American Red Cross in this field. The outstanding health accomplishment was the successful conclusion of the emergency health program launched as part of the relief work in the Mississippi Valley flood. In cooperation with State and Federal health agencies, the Red Cross successfully conducted a campaign directed to prevent epidemics as a result of flood conditions.

Thousands were immunized against typhoid and cholera, preventive measures against malaria were undertaken, and as the flood receded an intensive clean-up program was set in motion to purify water supplies, provide sanitary surroundings of rural communities and complete other health protective steps.

Beside the emergency work, the Red Cross Public Health Nursing Service developed about 100 new community nursing and health services throughout the country. Nurses, health instructors and others operating under the Red Cross also extended training in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick to both adult and junior groups, the latter in educational institutions. In certain instances, Every State, Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, had Home Hygiene classes which showed a large increase.

The contribution to national health achieving a growing recognition in the nutrition instruction service, through thousands of adults and school children are learning proper food for health and the fundamentals of correct food habits in relation to health. Classes include housewives, school children, foreign-born women, and persons in charge of homes and institutions, business girls and students in universities and colleges.

Besides these direct services for better health, the Red Cross enrolled reserve of nurses amounts to more than 4,000. These nurses are available for disaster relief services, epidemics and other serious emergencies, and are on call for duty with the Army, Navy and the Veterans' Bureau.

Red Cross health services are increasing in scope. It is pointed out, in calling attention to the forthcoming enrollment of new members in the Red Cross ranks, through whose support all Red Cross activities are made possible. The enrollment will take place from November 11 to 24.

Junior Red Cross Army of 6,000,000 in Schools

Members of the Junior Red Cross served a 27-year capacity for service during the Mississippi flood, according to reports to Red Cross National Headquarters covering their work. This group of enthusiastic school children responded spontaneously and generously to the needs of the flood victims. An indication of the importance of this work is contained in the report that Juniors in Boston contributed $7,500 to the relief fund.

Junior Red Cross members shared in reconstruction work in the Mississippi flood area several years ago, after the Florida storm, and are in the post-flood operations of the Red Cross among the people in the Mississippi Valley.

Junior Red Cross has 5,322,757 members, an increase of 273,229 in the last year. More than a million of the Junior Red Cross membership is distributed in the Philippines, Hawaii, Guam, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Alaska, and includes Indian and Eskimo children. Through the medium of the Junior Red Cross in the United States, and similar groups abroad, children of the world are being brought into closer understanding by international correspondence carried on by classes in the schools.

The Juniors at present have nearly twice the membership of the senior organization, but in the forthcoming membership enrollment of the Red Cross, from November 11 to 24, the Red Cross membership in 20 States in foreign lands, 5,000,000.

Foreign Calls for Help Answered by Red Cross

Despite the unusual requirements of relief in 77 disasters within the United States, the people of the country, through the American Red Cross, extended relief to sufferers in 20 disasters in foreign lands.

These included hurricanes in the West Indies, devastating portions of the Dominican Republic, the island of Pines, the Bahamas, and other islands in the group; fires in Haiti and Porto Rico; floods in Mexico; earthquakes, earthquakes, earthquakes, the Azores Islands, Armenia and Albania, and refugee relief operations in Bulgaria, Syria, and China. During the eleventh Annual Red Cross Call, November 11 to 24, the American Red Cross will seek a membership of 5,000,000 to keep its disaster relief and other services constantly ready for any call.
